

Project: Utah Transit Authority -- Utah Intermodal Centers

Recipient: Utah Transit Authority

Location: Salt Lake City, Utah

Purpose: The requested funds will aid UTA in the construction of intermodal centers in Orem, Provo, and Salt Lake City, Utah. Each will coincide with the start of commuter rail service. UTA is proposing construction of the Orem Intermodal Center west of Interstate-15, between 800 South and approximately 1000 South in Orem, Utah near Utah Valley University. This location is along the FrontRunner South commuter rail line, currently under construction, and is the northern terminus of the proposed Provo-Orem Bus Rapid Transit project. The Center will include the commuter rail station, BRT station, local bus route connections and a 500-stall park and ride. To date preliminary design and property purchases have been completed and the Environmental Assessment Re-evaluation is complete. The UTA is proposing construction of the Provo Intermodal Center near 600 South, between University Avenue and Freedom Boulevard (200 West) in downtown Provo, Utah. The proposed Provo Intermodal Center would serve local UTA bus patrons, Amtrak passengers, FrontRunner South commuter rail (currently under construction) passengers, the proposed Provo-Orem Rapid Transit line passengers, and a 800-stall park and ride. Currently, the Environmental Assessment is complete, design has begun, and property acquisition is nearly complete. The Salt Lake Intermodal Center initially opened in 2005 with local bus and intercity bus service. In 2008 Front Runner Commuter Rail and TRAX light rail were extended to the facility. The facility is well used today with thousands of daily boarding's and transfers.
